PRESENTATION

This simulation is normally conducted real time in person over the course of eight hours and at the conclusion the teams are asked to take the Mall Board of Directors on a tour of your business. However you are required to complete this over the period of Seven weeks. They each have five minutes - and only five minutes - to make as strong of an impression as possible. All members of the Team and Judge panelist will be evaluating both your business and your ability to sell your ideas during the presentation. Due to the nature of the program we are unable to recreate the exercise in its entirety. But we believe many of the exercises are important to give you a broad overview of the many aspects of starting and running a business.

For each one of the packets you will be asked to complete certain questions or be asked to complete certain tasks. When the packet is complete you will submit it via the provided email either as a single document or as multiple items based on the assignment.

For right now, keep these things in mind:

- A large part of the experience will involve cooperation and delegation. Demonstrate these whenever possible.
- Always work to make your business unique, special and attractive.
- Keep asking yourself questions concerning WHY you did or didn't do something.

WHAT BUSINESS AM I IN?

Anyone beginning their own business needs to be very clear on one critical point: WHAT BUSINESS AM I REALLY IN?

We're not talking store fronts or business cards yet. You need to sit down at this point and determine what it is that your business wants to achieve. What is the product or service you're going to provide?

A great idea combined with perspiration will not guarantee a successful business. Many businesses go "under" because the entrepreneur has a good idea, but hasn't bothered to think it through completely.

Case study 1: Mr. Ewell B. Kleen had dreams of opening up a chain of laundromats. He thought he was going into the cleaning business. Fourteen months and $52,000 of debt later he found out that he was not only owner/manager of the cleaning business, but was also:

Maintenance man
Delivery person
Snack bar operator

Bookkeeper
Parking lot attendant
Advertising manager

Mr. Kleen's "simple" coin-operated laundry turned into much more than he had anticipated. The initial success was short-lived and was soon followed by complications and failure. He ended up trying to do too much for too many people and spread his resources too thin.

Case study 2: Adaeze Okafor had always believed that Nigeria's food problem was not a farming problem; it was a distribution problem. Growing up in Enugu and later studying Agricultural Economics at the University of Nigeria Nsukka, she watched smallholder farmers in her community sell tomatoes for ₦300 per basket while Lagos markets sold the same tomatoes for ₦2,000. Middlemen captured most of the value. Farmers earned poverty wages. Consumers paid city prices. In 2021, Adaeze founded AgroFresh Nigeria with her cousin Emeka, a software developer, and her childhood friend Bisi, a logistics manager. Their pitch was elegant - a mobile platform connecting farmers directly to restaurant owners, hotels, and food vendors across Abuja and Lagos, cutting out intermediaries and giving farmers a fairer price.

"What business are we really in?"

When a potential investor asked this question in their first pitch meeting, the three founders gave three different answers.

Adaeze said, We are in the agricultural marketplace business. Emeka said, We are in the logistics technology business. Bisi said, We are in the food supply chain business. The investor thanked them and left without funding them.

That painful meeting forced AgroFresh to go back to the beginning and answer the fundamental questions of identity, purpose, and structure. The team spent two weeks in what they called their Genesis Sessions, a series of honest, sometimes heated conversations about who they were and what problem they were truly solving.

Keeping in mind today's discussion on the mall, decide what you can handle at first. What kind of business will fit in BEST with both our mall and the abilities of your team? Discuss and answer each of the following questions. Be prepared to explain and justify your decisions.

1. What type of business/service will your group be involved in?
2. Why did you select this business/service?:
3. For your business to work you will have to purchase certain products and services (i.e. shelving, cleaning people, security, special equipment).
4. Work with your team to prepare a short sales presentation to the Judge. Keep in mind that the board doesn't need to accept your idea. They're the primary funding agents for the mall and your delegates will need to convince them your business idea is a SAFE risk. They'll obviously be looking for "dreamers," but also practicality and logic. You need to convince them you have a good idea that can (will) succeed. For the purpose of this exercise, given the nature of the online program, you can assume that the Board has accepted your business idea.

REMEMBER:

1. In real life every idea is not a viable business idea, and some ideas will work in certain situations or certain locations but not others. This is why the location of the business and the target market demographics are important particularly for retail businesses.

YOUR TARGET MARKET

Be All You Can Dream

YOUR TARGET MARKET

Ideally you hope EVERYONE will want what your business has to offer. However, one of the most common mistakes that small business owners make is "trying to be all things to everyone." The plain and simple facts are that people are different and you're probably not experienced enough, nor is your business big enough, to go after the "billions sold" market that McDonald's has attracted.

When you're just beginning a business you hate to lose any potential customers. Your worries include:

"What if they don't return?"

"What if they think I don't care?"

"What if I make them angry?"

You need to accept the fact that it's impractical, and even unnecessary, to try to please everyone. Unless your business is especially unique, you can't do something different for everyone who walks in the door. What you should concern yourself with instead is consistently responding to current customer needs so they'll (1) choose to return and (2) tell others about your business

You've already spent time thinking about your product or service. Get your team to now give as much attention to the customer. Work up a description of the kind of customer you expect to attract to your business.

Concerning YOUR customers:

1. Will they be males, females or both?
2. How old will they be?
3. How much money will they have to spend?
4. What styles/fashions do they prefer?
5. How often will they visit the business?
6. What do they like...don't they like?
7. What factors influence the decisions that they make in life?
8. What are they looking for that will make them TRUST in you?

PRICING

Be All You Can Dream
An Entrepreneurial Workshop

www.jbsnigeria.com

PRICING

Customers are attracted to a particular business for a variety of reasons. So far we have looked at:

- Location
- Product/Service
- Name
- Image/Slogan

Another major item still remains. HOW MUCH WILL PEOPLE NEED TO SPEND WHEN THEY COME TO YOU?

As you decide how much to charge, three questions need to be studied, discussed, and answered by the business team.

1. Are prices HIGH enough to cover expenses and allow an acceptable profit?

2. Are prices LOW enough to: - compete with other businesses?

- attract new customers?

- keep customers?

3. Are prices FAIR to your customers?

Have your business team consider the above pricing options and then answer the following questions.

A. List examples of your business expenses and decide whether you have LOW, MEDIUM, or HIGH costs.

B. What quality of merchandise/services will you provide to your customers LOW, MEDIUM, or HIGH? Write a brief, convincing rationale for this decision.

C. Consider the price range that a customer can expect from your business and then list the specific prices for five items or services that you will offer. Choose a representative sample of items/services.

D. The business name, slogan, and business card convey a message to the customer. What message does your pricing policy give?

E. How do you plan to make a profit?

- Quantity sales due to low prices?
- Quality products with high mark ups?
- Inexperienced employees with low salaries?
- Expensive personal services for those who are willing to pay?
- Hard work and long hours by you, with no employees at first?
- Minimal employee benefits?
- Advertising make people want it and then increase the price?
- Aggressive salesmanship with bonuses to the best salespeople?

explanation of your answer.

Select any of these or, better yet, create your own. In any case, be sure to provide a written explanation of your answer.

CUSTOMER SERVICE POLICIES

Be All You Can Dream
An Entrepreneurial Workshop

www.jbsnigeria.com

CUSTOMER SERVICE POLICIES

Choose a local business that is a favorite for many of the members of your team.

Brainstorm reasons why it's so popular.

What do they do to make you feel welcome and appreciated?

What makes you feel like you're getting your money's worth?

How is the business attractive and comfortable to visit?

What is done that makes it more convenient to shop there?

Your answers are possible examples of customer services. These include any product, service or condition that is appealing to the customer and makes their shopping experience that much more enjoyable.

Chicken Republic gives VALUE MEALS for LOWER PRICES

Temu offers a large VARIETY of products

Spotify creates PLAYLISTS BASED ON YOUR MOOD & HABITS

Bokku Mart sells RELIEF from HIGH PRICES.

Flutterwave powers GLOBAL PAYMENTS FOR AFRICAN BUSINESSES

Opay gives FAST ISSUE RESOLUTION & AGENT SUPPORT

As the business owner, it is important for you to realize these customer services will cost you dollars up front. You could save money by eliminating them, but your hope is that the services will be appealing enough to attract new customers and bring back the old. In the long run, the increase in customers should more than make up for the money spent providing customer services.

A . What are the five steps your customer goes through from first contact to receiving your service?

B. At which of these steps could your business fail, and what is your backup plan?

C. List three customer services that your business is going to offer and give reasons why you decided on these.

D. List three customer services from businesses similar to yours that your business WILL NOT provide and give reasons why you have decided against these.

E. Create a unique customer service (not mentioned anywhere above) for each of the following events.

1. New Year
2. Valentine's Day
3. IWD and Mother's Day
4. Easter
5. EID
6. Worker's day
7. Democracy day

PERSONNEL

At some point, people in business realize that they can't get it all done by themselves and begin looking for some help. This is often a critical step for a number of reasons.

Being an employer requires some very special awareness and skills. If you're like many people, you're going to want and expect employees to work in the same manner as you do. If your employees are typical, you need to realize early that they will never be exactly like you. They'll have different work styles. And, most importantly, they will seldom look at the business with the same love and care that you do.

Employees can be a significant source of stress and frustration unless the owner takes precautions ahead of time to minimize the potential problem areas. The success of any business is largely dependent upon the quality and cooperative efforts of the employees. Before hiring your new staff, spend some time detailing what you will want them to do for you and what you can do to make work more comfortable and enjoyable for them.

A. List the top five qualities that are important for an employee at your business.

B. Identify the kinds of employee behaviors that concern you and classify them into three categories:

1. Behaviors that are an irritation, but will likely be tolerated
2. Behaviors that will require a reprimand
3. Behaviors that will necessitate termination (firing)

C. Create a "WE ARE HIRING" advertisement for your social media business page

D. Identify the five most important questions that you will ask at the job interview.

WHEN YOU COMPLETE ITEMS "A" THROUGH "D" of THE PERSONNEL BUSINESS PLAN SEND TO MAIL and name the document "Personnel Policies".

E. Complete the "Employee Manual" that has been provided for you. POST COMPLETED MANUAL to MAIL and name the document "Employee Manual".

STORE FRONT AND LAYOUT

Be All You Can Dream
An Entrepreneurial Workshop

www.jbsnigeria.com

STORE FRONT AND LAYOUT

Two of the more enjoyable areas of small business ownership need your attention at this time...designing the front and inside of your store.

One of your most important advertisements is your store front. Every customer obviously sees it and every non-customer passing by is presented with an opportunity to be attracted by it. In a sense, your store front is a permanent billboard that should have an impact on people. It's your job to design a store front that will create the kind of impact that you want. It should reflect the image that you've so carefully crafted

Once inside, the arrangement of the store's fixtures, furnishings, and equipment will also have an impact on the customer. There should be maximum exposure to a variety of merchandise along with a minimum of clutter and opportunity for "traffic jams". If the layout of your business is done properly, people will walk out of your store with two things they may not have walked in with....a smile and a purchase.

A. Think of some different store fronts in your community. A few have a certain quality that sets them off from all the others. They may be creative, they may be attractive, and in some cases, they may have just a very simple elegance. Identify three examples of effective store fronts in your community and describe WHY you feel they're effective.

B. In detail, design the store front of your business. You need not worry about cost here, but keep your creativity realistic. Be sure to keep in mind both the make-up of the mall and the image of your business. (You may send to the mail as a separate document. Please label the document "Store Front Design")

C. Pick a location from the See Store Locations and Dimensions template below. Plan a layout for your business in separate document. Work only on the specifics of the main room with other areas (i.e. rest rooms, stock rooms, dressing rooms) indicated along the edges of the drawing. Based on the store location from the Design the room as thoroughly and accurately as possible. (You may send to mail as a separate document. Please label the document "Store Layout")

ADVERTISING

ADVERTISING

Large, successful businesses spend millions of dollars on advertising each year. People are hired by them to create advertising campaigns that will attract new customers and Keep old ones.

The difficulty that small business owners face is that they seldom have the available dollars to hire someone to do their advertising. Advertising becomes just another one of the many jobs that new business owners must assume.

Advertising media that is generally available to the small business owner includes:

|                                         |                                            |
|-----------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------|
| Direct mail (Newsletters)               | Newspaper                                  |
| Radio (podcast)                         | TV                                         |
| Outdoor signs                           | Display windows                            |
| Social media (X, facebook, TikTok , IG) | Specialty items (pens, matches, calendars) |
